ISM Assessment #21(Final Project Touches)

This week Vanessa and I meet and started to brainstorm even more. And with Final Presentation Night approaching us fast. It has been hard to decide between all our brainstorming ideas and which ones to go with as well as I need to meet with my school counselor to discuss the google forms and National Honors Society forms and how we can spread the word; I went ahead and emailed both forms to my counselor to try and get a head start on that part of the project. We are also still trying to figure out how to reach out to the man trying to set up the learning disabilities program and how Vanessa and I can help spread the word. I was also planning on meeting with my school counselor to set up the Nation Honors Society program where students help other students get free tutoring and, in return, can get hours and not have to pay; therefore, it would be a win-win for everyone. I have also started my final project presentation and am working on it with Vanessa to make it the best way to bring information. I have also made a google form to reach out to all students to tell their stories and learning disabilities stories. So far, we have a lot of people reaching out wanting to bring awareness! We finally got back to a somewhat normal this was the first whole week back at school since Texas Winter Snow Storm! Although it put my final project behind a couple of days, I got to meet with Vanessa. Together, we reached out to both my school counselor and Coach Goff to discuss and brainstorm some ideas relating to the final project, which is approaching fast. As of right now, I am just uploading this week the National Honors Society canvas page form that I made. I also had during the week meet with my school counselor, and we went over a few things but, for the most part, looked over the google forms for the NHS free tutoring for the kids of Frisco High School for service hours. This puts one part of my final project as complete but with such little time and still so much to do for the next couple of weeks, I have to put the final touches on my project and even figure out a way to add learning disabilities to spread awareness into my project which is where Coach Goff and the school comes in! Overall, another great, hard-working week, but I still have lots to do but slowly can see my final project coming together!
